To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this letter in behalf of Neal Peacock of Peacock Speaks. Neal presented to our GEAR UP students during our lunch meeting the topic of discussion and activities of "Thinking Out of the Box". This was not only educational for our students but entertaining as well.

Neal's presentation included beneficial life skills such as diffusing potential confrontational situations, Taking control of a handshake and use of body language in a positive manner to make a positive and lasting impression.

While presenting these life skills, he used examples and humor to make the presentation informational and interesting for the students. He called upon them to help out with the demonstrations. The student involvement made his presentation experience more enjoyable and educational.

While talking to students about being creative and thinking out of the box, he involved them by sharing examples and asking questions. When they left the lunch they were excited and, I am sure more confident to try new things without being intimidated.

As a GEAR UP employee it was fun to watch the excitement on the students' faces and listen to the laughs from the stories that he told to reinforce the message he had for them.
