To Whom It May Concern:

I have had the honor of working very closely with and under the direction of Neal Peacock since my sophomore year of high school. Neal is the best of the best. As a coach and mentor, he is dedicated, supportive, and thoroughly willing to do whatever it takes to help his team members learn how to be successful and achieve results. As a teacher, he is knowledgeable, passionate, and has the ability to inspire learning and understanding in creative and engaging ways. As an individual he is caring, loyal, and a great friend. All these qualities make Neal a leader of leaders.

Although there are many, two of Neal's greatest strengths as an educator and speaker are his sense of humor and his stories. Neal's lectures are always full of powerful, personal stories and experiences. Not only are his experiences interesting and insightful, but they prove that he doesn't just talk about being a leader, he knows how to be a leader. His sense of humor has the ability to bring his lessons to a more personal and understandable level.

As one of his students, Neal has not only taught me about history, public speaking, and leadership- but about life and human relationships. It is with my deepest respect and appreciation that I recommend him as a speaker and educator.

Sincerely,
